On March 12, 2018, the City's Commission on Immigrant Affairs passed a recommendation regarding rental assistance resources for refugees. Austin is the largest refugee resettlement site in Central Texas, and many refugees need affordable housing and rental assistance. In response to the recommendation, the Commission met with various City department officials and community agencies to discuss rental assistance resources for refugees living within Austin. Entities participating in this meeting included Housing Authority of the City of Austin (HACA), Caritas of Austin, Ending Community Homelessness Coalition (ECHO), the Austin Public Health Department, and the Neighborhood Housing and Community Development (NHCD). The Commission concluded that City resources were not adequate to address the needs of refugees in the community.
