CASE NUMBER: C14H-2025-0066

HLC DATE: July 2, 2025 PC DATE: August 12, 2025 CC Date: September 25, 2025

APPLICANT: Austin Convention Center (Kalpana Sutaria)

HISTORIC NAME: Trask House and Castleman-Bull House

WATERSHED: Waller Creek

ADDRESS: 201-217 (201, 201 1/2, 205, 217) Red River Street and 603 E. 3rd Street

ZONING CHANGE: CBD-H to CBD (Tract 1), CBD to CBD (Tracts 2 and 3), and CBD to CBD-H (Tract 4)

COUNCIL DISTRICT: 9

STAFF RECOMMENDATION: Grant the proposed zoning changes from CBD-H to CBD (Tract 1), CBD to CBD (Tracts 2 and 3), and CBD to CBD-H (Tract 4) in accordance with direction from City Council Resolution No. 20250605-022.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR LANDMARK DESIGNATION: The Castleman-Bull House is eligible for historic zoning under the criteria for architecture and historical associations.

HISTORIC LANDMARK COMMISSION ACTION: Recommend the proposed zoning changes from CBD-H to CBD (Tract 1), CBD to CBD (Tracts 2 and 3), and CBD to CBD-H (Tract 4) (10-0).

PLANNING COMMISSION ACTION: Recommend the proposed zoning changes from CBD-H to CBD (Tract 1), CBD to CBD (Tracts 2 and 3), and CBD to CBD-H (Tract 4) (11-0).

CITY COUNCIL ACTION: June 5, 2025 – Approve Resolution No. 20250605-022, directing staff to process the applications for rezoning of City Property, to recommend appropriate rezoning, and take necessary steps to ensure an efficient rezoning process to avoid unnecessary delay.

CASE MANAGERS: Kalan Contreras (512-974-2727) and Marcelle Boudreaux (512-974-8094)

NEIGHBORHOOD ORGANIZATIONS: Austin Independent School District, Austin Neighborhoods Council, City of Austin Downtown Commission, Downtown Austin Alliance, Downtown Austin Neighborhood Assn. (DANA), El Concilio Mexican American Neighborhoods, Friends of Austin Neighborhoods, Homeless Neighborhood Association, Lower Waller Creek, Preservation Austin, Tejano Town, Waterloo Greenway

DEPARTMENT COMMENTS: Certificates of Appropriateness to relocate the Castleman-Bull House on the same property at 201 Red River Street (HR-2025-071074) and to relocate the Trask House and outbuildings from 217 Red River Street to Convention Center property close to their original sites on Neches Street (HR-2025-071055) were approved at the July 2, 2025, Historic Landmark Commission public hearing.

The rezoning application seeks to remove historic zoning from the Trask House lot (Tract 2) so the historic structures therein may be relocated, stored, and replaced near their original location at the corner of Red River and East Cesar Chavez Streets. The buildings' footprints will then be zoned H per the memorandum provided by the Austin Convention Center (see backup). Interpretive material is proposed for the buildings' new locations.

The proposal also seeks to apply historic zoning to the Castleman-Bull House's proposed location on its current lot in preparation for the house's relocation and reorientation (Tract 4). The house will be stored offsite and replaced in the same relative area, rotated to face the Waterloo Greenway trailhead entrance at the southern portion of the lot.

BASIS FOR RECOMMENDATION: According to a historical narrative recorded in the early 2000s, the Castleman-Bull House—then referred to as the Fontaine House—was built by Austin merchant R. M. Castleman between 1869 and 1873. It housed four generations of the Castleman-Bull family before St. David's Episcopal Church acquired it in 1963. The house is a rare surviving example of the nineteenth century residences once found throughout downtown Austin.

§ 25-2-352(3)(c)(i) Architecture. The property embodies the distinguishing characteristics of a recognized architectural style, type, or method of construction; exemplifies technological innovation in design or construction; displays high artistic value in representing ethnic or folk art, architecture, or construction; represents a rare example of an architectural style in the city; serves as an outstanding example of the work of an architect, builder, or artisan who significantly contributed to the development of the city, state, or nation; possesses cultural, historical, or architectural value as a particularly fine or unique example of a utilitarian or vernacular structure; or represents an architectural curiosity or one-of-a-kind building.

The historical narrative (see backup materials) describes the Italianate building's intact—and now recently rehabilitated—architectural features as follows:

The house is remarkably intact, having been protected and preserved by the four generations of the original builder's family who continuously occupied the house for almost one hundred years. The historic porch, interior doors, windows, millwork, trim and fireplaces are, for the most part, intact. When the church acquired the house, they were able to use the building almost as it was, without major modification of the interior or the principal facades. [...]

308 East Bois D'Arc Street was a two-story rectangular structure, with a half basement below...The walls were load-bearing masonry, limestone at the foundation level and brick above. The house has elements of the Italianate style: a low-pitched roof, wide eaves set on decorative brackets, tall narrow windows with arched heads and hooded trim, [and a] one story porch across the front façade...[It is] symmetrical in plan, each floor having a center hall flanked by two square rooms with fireplaces in the interior walls. The room on the east end of the first floor, probably the parlor, had a large bay window in the east wall. [An] early...addition to the house was an ell-wing, constructed at the east side of the back of the house...Between 1900 and 1935, the...one-story frame wing at the back of the house...was removed and replaced with a two-story masonry wing...A two-story frame element was added at the northwest corner of the addition and the center section of the front porch was enclosed at the second story.¹

§ 25-2-352(3)(c)(ii) Historical Associations. The property has long-standing significant associations with persons, groups, institutions, businesses, or events of historical importance that contributed significantly to the history of the city, state, or nation or represents a significant portrayal of the cultural practices or the way of life of a definable group of people in a historic time.

The Castleman-Bull House was home to four generations of the Castleman-Bull family before St. David's Episcopal Church acquired it in 1963. It was built between 1869 and 1873 by R. M. Castleman, a high-profile merchant and civic activist who had worked as a claims agent and volunteered as a schoolteacher and Deputy Sheriff in Bastrop County before enlisting with the Confederacy. After an injury, he returned to Austin, reportedly dubious of the war's goal, and started a mercantile business with partner Albert Smith. Castleman led a large-scale coalition of merchants, as well as a fire brigade team. He left the house to daughter Margaret Castleman Bull, who in turn left it to daughter Margaret Moore. Moore refused to sell the house for nearly two decades before transferring it to St. David's at the behest of her brothers; she moved out in the early 1960s, and the home was used as a rectory and educational facility.² When the church sought to demolish it for a new addition in the 1990s, the original portion of the building was detached from the church and moved to its current site in 2004.

ESTIMATED ANNUAL TAX EXEMPTION: N/A

CURRENT APPRAISED VALUE: N/A

PRESENT USE: Vacant

DATE BUILT/PERIOD OF SIGNIFICANCE: ca. 1869-1873; 1869-1975

INTEGRITY/ALTERATIONS: The Trask House was relocated to its current site from 105 Neches and zoned as a historic landmark in 1991. It was fully rehabilitated in 2008. The Castleman-Bull House, once connected to St. David's Episcopal Church on E. 7th Street, was moved to its current site around 2004. Its exterior was fully rehabilitated in 2019. Major alterations of both properties took place within the historic period.

PRESENT OWNERS: Austin Convention Center

ORIGINAL OWNER(S): R. M. Castleman, Frances Trask

OTHER HISTORICAL DESIGNATIONS: The Trask House was originally designated as a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark at its original location on 105 Neches Street in 1972 and zoned "H" in 1977 (Ordinance No. 770609-B). Historic zoning was removed from 105 Neches Street in 1989 in preparation for the move to its current Red River location (Ordinance No. 891019-D) and applied to the portion of 217 Red River Street containing the house and outbuilding in 1991 (Ordinance No. 910613-I).

RESOLUTION NO. 20250605-022

WHEREAS, the City owns the property located 201, 201 1/2, 205, and 217 Red River Street and 603 East 3rd Street (“City Property”); and

WHEREAS, City Property is located across from the existing Austin Convention Center site located at 500 East Cesar Chavez Street; and

WHEREAS, the City is currently working on the expansion and redevelopment of the Austin Convention Center (the “Project”) which will require a total demolition of the existing Austin Convention Center; and

WHEREAS, prior to the commencement of the Project, the District Chilling Plant #4 that was previously located at the Austin Convention Center was decommissioned; and

WHEREAS, the Project is planning to install a new stand-alone District Chilling Plant #4.1 on City Property to replace the decommissioned District Chilling Plant #4; and

WHEREAS, City Property is the current location of the Castleman-Bull House and Trask House; and

WHEREAS, the Project requires relocation of both the Castleman-Bull House and Trask House to accommodate the underground installation of the new Downtown District Cooling Plant #4.1 on City Property; NOW, THEREFORE,

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF AUSTIN:

Council initiates rezoning for City Property.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

The City Manager is directed to process the applications for rezoning of City Property, to recommend appropriate rezoning, and take necessary steps to ensure an efficient rezoning process to avoid unnecessary delay.

NOTES:

1. CONTRACTOR TO COORDINATE WITH UTILITY COMPANIES FOR DISCONNECTS.
2. THIS NOTE IS BEING PLACED ON THE PLAN SET IN THE ABSENCE OF A TEMPORARY TRAFFIC CONTROL STRATEGY WITH THE FULL UNDERSTANDING THAT A MINIMUM OF 6 WEEKS PRIOR TO THE START OF CONSTRUCTION, A TEMPORARY TRAFFIC CONTROL PLAN MUST BE REVIEWED AND APPROVED BY RIGHT OF WAY MANAGEMENT DIVISION. STANDARD DETAILS ARE NOT A TRAFFIC CONTROL PLAN. THE OWNER/REPRESENTATIVE FURTHER RECOGNIZE THAT A REVIEW FEE, AS PRESCRIBED BY THE MOST CURRENT VERSION IS SUBMITTED TO RIGHT OF WAY MANAGEMENT DIVISION FOR REVIEW.

- THE FOLLOWING MUST BE TAKEN INTO CONSIDERATION WHEN DEVELOPING FUTURE TRAFFIC CONTROL STRATEGIES:
- PEDESTRIAN AND BICYCLE TRAFFIC ACCESS MUST BE MAINTAINED AT ALL TIMES, UNLESS OTHERWISE AUTHORIZED BY RIGHT OF WAY MANAGEMENT.
 - NO LONG TERM LANE CLOSURES WILL BE AUTHORIZED, UNLESS RIGHT OF WAY MANAGEMENT DETERMINES THAT ADEQUATE ACCOMMODATIONS HAVE BEEN MADE TO MINIMIZE TRAFFIC IMPACT.
 - PROJECT SHOULD BE PHASED SO THAT UTILITY INSTALLATION MINIMALLY IMPACTS EXISTING OR TEMPORARY PEDESTRIAN FACILITIES

HISTORIC STRUCTURE REPORT FOR
SAINT DAVID'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH
History of Fontaine House

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE

The house known today as Fontaine House was built by Austin merchant R. M. Castleman for his family more than 125 years ago. The masonry residence was home to four generations of the Castleman family before St. David's Episcopal Church acquired it in 1963. The house is a surviving example of the nineteenth century residential structures once found throughout downtown Austin.

CASTLEMAN'S EARLY YEARS

R. M. Castleman came to Texas at the age of four. His father Andrew Castleman moved his family, including six year old Margaret and two year old Robert, from Nashville, Tennessee to Bastrop County in 1840. The 1850 Texas census lists the Castleman family, with the addition of the Texas born son Richard, as residents of Bastrop County. The entry for Andrew E. Castleman states he is a 47 year old farmer with $1000 of real estate. Another group of Bastrop County settlers, the Smith family, was to become well known to the Castlemans over the coming years.

Alfred Smith was born in North Carolina in 1815, and moved to Bastrop County as a young man in the 1830's. He was a farmer and owned a sawmill business, having contracted with the town of Bastrop for the sole right to cut timber in the Pinery for a period of ten years. His wife Ann, who was about ten years his junior, came to Texas from Tennessee. Their daughter Amelia E. was born in 1842 in Texas. By the time of the 1850 census, the Smiths had moved to land outside Austin, near Webberville. The entry listed Alfred Smith as a farmer with real estate valued at $6,000.

Living with them was James W. Smith, Alfred's younger brother. He was born in North Carolina in 1830 and came to Texas in 1838. His entry in the 1850 census notes he was a 19 year old resident with Alfred, Ann and Amelia Smith. He attended college in Kentucky and studied law in Tennessee, where he got a license to practice law 1852. He returned to Texas and was admitted to the Texas bar in 1853. He and Margaret E. Castleman, Andrew Castleman's oldest child, were married in 1854 and moved to Austin.

By the time of the 1860 census, Andrew Castleman and his two younger sons, Robert and Richard, had moved from Bastrop County to Coryell County. Andrew was still a farmer, but had improved his lot considerably as evidenced by his $4,000 of real estate and $2,000 personal estate. His son Robert, age 21 at the time, was a herdsman, with a $100 personal estate. Richard, age 18, had no occupation.

R. M. Castleman, Andrew's oldest son, had remained in Bastrop County, his place of residence in the 1860 census. He was a 25 year old man, occupied as a claims agent, with a personal estate of $2,000. During the 1850's, R. M. worked as a country school teacher and served as Deputy Sheriff of Bastrop County. A legal advertisement in the Bastrop Advertiser of March 14, 1857, offered his services as a collector and agent, as follows:

The undersigned, Deputy Sheriff of Bastrop County, tenders his services to the public as a Collector and GENERAL AGENT for non-residents. Persons residing at a distance, having business of this character to transact in this or the neighboring counties can save time and expense by entrusting the same to his charge and may rely in all cases upon his prosecuting their claims to a final settlement with promptness and dispatch.

R. M. Castleman
Bastrop, Nov. 1st, '56.

In August of 1858, he ran for and won re-election to the office of Assessor and Collector of Bastrop County, beating his opponent George Allen 376 to 300 votes.

CASTLEMAN IN AUSTIN

R. M. Castleman moved to Austin shortly before enlisting in the Confederate Army in 1861. Before he left for the war, he sold all his possessions, earning several thousand dollars. He converted it to US twenty-dollar gold coins, put the coins in pickle jars, and buried them on the Webberville farm of Alfred Smith, to be stored until his return. (His grandson, A. C. Bull, said Castleman believed in the Southern cause enough to fight for it, but he was dubious of the ultimate outcome of the struggle.)

Attaining the rank of major, he was seriously wounded during the Battle of Chickamauga Creek, September 19-20, 1863, and was furloughed home. He returned destitute and in poor health, but his planning before the war served him well. He found his gold stake intact, at a time when Confederate currency was useless, and was able to start his own mercantile business in Austin. He was also able to invest in Austin real estate. He made his first recorded purchase together with Alfred Smith, his old friend and neighbor, in November 1865. The two men bought a half lot on the west side of Congress Avenue between Pecan (6th) and Bois D'Arc (7th) Streets from Abner H. Cook for $2,000.

Austin was established as the capital of the Republic of Texas in 1839. Judge Edwin Waller and a team of surveyors laid out the city that same year. The original city plan was a simple grid of 179 business and residential blocks, four public squares, and designated areas for public buildings and institutions. They sited the city on the north bank of the Colorado River, situated between Waller Creek on the east and Shoal Creek on the west. Waller named streets running east to west for trees found in Texas and those running north to south for rivers in the state. The earliest structures were built of logs, but later decades saw the construction of masonry buildings in a range of fashionable architectural styles. The onset of the Civil War slowed building and development, but the city grew quickly with the end of the war. The arrival of the railroad in 1871 encouraged more development.

In 1866 Castleman married Amelia E. Smith, the daughter of Alfred and Ann Smith. Their first child, Margaret, was born on April 17, 1867. Castleman set about arranging for a house for his growing family, setting his sights on land fronting on East Bois D'Arc Street, just east of St. David's Episcopal Church. In 1867 he acquired Lot 5 of Block 86, paying $1,000 for the 66' by 128' lot. In 1868 he bought Lot 4 of Block 86, the adjacent lot to the west, for $137. Lot 6, the corner lot at Bois D'Arc and Trinity, was purchased in 1870 for $500.

Although family historians place the construction of the house in 1869, it was perhaps as late as 1873 when the construction took place. Daily Statesman editions of August 1873 include two references to a handsome two story house being built by Mr. Castleman.

THE HOUSE AT 308 E. BOIS D'ARC STREET

The house Castleman built at 308 East Bois D'Arc Street was a two story rectangular structure, with a half basement below following the natural slope of the lot. The walls were load bearing masonry, limestone at the basement and foundation level and brick at the two floors above. The house had elements of the Italianate style – low pitched roof, widely overhanging eaves set on decorative brackets, tall narrow windows with arched heads and hooded trim, one story porch across the front facade – that had become popular in the United States in the years leading up to the Civil War. Introduced in Austin in several buildings constructed in the late 1850's, including the State Lunatic Asylum and the Institute for the Blind, the Italianate style was still quite popular in the 1870's. The house was symmetrical in plan, each floor having a center hall flanked by two square rooms with fireplaces in the interior walls. The room on the east end of the first floor, probably the parlor, had a large bay window in the east wall.

Early, perhaps original, addition to the house was an ell-wing, constructed at the east side of the back of the house. The wing was originally one story, frame construction with a shingle roof, as shown in nineteenth century Sanborn maps of Austin. In later years, the wing was replaced with a two story, masonry addition that remains today. Early maps and photographs also show several different one story, frame construction outbuildings on the site, located on the alley, that were probably for the storage of vehicles, livestock and household goods.

During the time of the planning and construction of the house, Castleman's business interests prospered. Notices posted in the Daily Statesman alerted readers to the sale of prize-winning sewing machines at Castleman's store on the avenue. His annual buying trip to New York was reported in the Local Matters column each year. The first city directory published for Austin in 1872-73 listed R. M. Castleman as a dealer in dry goods. The business was located on Congress Avenue between Pecan and Bois D'Arc Streets, probably on the land Castleman and Smith bought from Abner Cook in 1865. In August of 1874, the Daily Statesman reported that an extension to Castleman's large store was almost complete. Business continued to grow, as evidenced by the expanding listing given for the shop in the city directories. The 1877-78 entry included "dry goods, clothing, boots, etc." and the 1879-80 entry was "dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, hats, caps and gents' furnishing goods."

He also gave time to civic duties and other causes. When the Texas Central Railroad demanded payment in gold instead of currency in 1872, he led a coalition of over fifty merchants in action against the policy. He was elected the First Assistant Foreman of the Washington Steam Fire Engine Company No. 1 in 1873. He continued to buy land in the city, sometimes in partnership with his father-in-law Alfred Smith and his brother-in-law James W. Smith. James W. Smith had attained his own position in the city, serving several terms as Mayor in the 1860's and as Chief Justice and County Judge of Travis County through the 1870's.

Castleman's family also grew, but not as he might have wished. Three sons and a daughter were born between 1870 and 1878, but three of these children passed away at young ages. Daughter Amelia L. was born in 1872 and died in April 1875, suffering critical injuries in an accident involving fire. The newspaper reported that "friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Castleman were pained to learn yesterday morning that their sweet little girl, whose clothes caught on fire the day before, had died during the night." Son Rehum M., born in 1874, died before he reached the age of two. Son Alfred, born in 1870 died as a young man in 1886. Only Margaret and Richard lived to be adults.

Castleman's wife, Amelia E., was apparently a frail woman. In July 1873, Castleman advertised for a woman to cook, wash and iron and a girl to nurse, noting that Swedes were preferred. Despite the help the family put on, Amelia was struck ill with consumption and became an invalid for several years. They sought relief in other locations, including West Texas and Colorado, but she could not recover. She died on September 5, 1879, at the family home. The Daily Statesman described her as the daughter of an old and respected citizen of Austin, a zealous member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, a woman of many lovable qualities and with many devoted friends.

Eight months before Amelia's death, Castleman entered into a venture that would occupy him until the end of his life. He began to acquire farm land southeast of Austin. In the early years he had a partner in the venture, but in 1887 he bought out his partner's interest in the farm and became the sole owner. The improvements on the farm included a gin and barns for livestock. By the early 1890's, Castleman had retired from the dry goods business he had on Congress Avenue. His listing in the 1893-94 city directory is as a farmer and stock raiser, and he kept an office in the building at 606 Congress. By 1898, his son Richard was a farmer as well, and may have assisted his father with the farm affairs.

MARGARET CASTLEMAN BULL

Margaret Castleman attended the B. J. Smith school for women, at the corner of West 6th and Rio Grande, and the Bickler School, at 11th and Congress. She was also active in the Ladies Aid Society of the First Cumberland Presbyterian Church, serving as the secretary for many years. Perhaps through the church or the activities of the Ladies Aid Society she met R. P. Bull, who would become her husband in 1891.

Richard Platt Bull was born in Mobile, Alabama in 1848. He served in the Civil War, worked for a time in Galveston in the cotton business, then went to New York City and came to Austin in about 1888. He worked as the steward and bookkeeper at the State Lunatic Asylum, at the north edge of the city, where he also lived. In 1891, he and Margaret Castleman were married and he moved to the Castleman house at 308 E. 7th Street. He worked as a bookkeeper for various companies and as an independent accountant. His offices were next to those of the law practice of James W. Smith at 513 Congress Avenue. Over the years, he served on the boards of various organizations including the State Lunatic Asylum, the school board, the Travis County Farmers' Alliance and the Confederate Home in Austin. In the last few years of his life, he retired from the accountant practice and engaged in farming activities, perhaps with his Castleman inlaws.

R. P. and Margaret Bull had five children, born between the years of 1893 and 1903, and they all lived in the house at 308 East 7th. In fact, the city directory for 1903-1904 lists eleven people at the house -- R. M. Castleman, his daughter Margaret, husband R. P. and their five children, and his son Richard, wife Lena and their son. Sadly, the number of occupants was reduced through the death of several family members. One of R. P. and Margaret Bull's children died in infancy and Richard Castleman died in 1906 at the age of 28. His wife Lena and son moved soon afterwards.

At some point between 1900 and 1935, the most significant architectural change to the house was made. The one story frame wing at the back of the house, shown on the early Sanborn maps, was removed and replaced with a two story masonry wing. This addition provided a great deal of new space, probably needed since several families occupied the house in the early twentieth century. The new addition included two rooms at the basement level. At the first floor a back hall was added, as well as a room opening to the parlor, possibly a dining room, a kitchen and pantry. At the second floor a back hall and a large room for sleeping were added. (In later years, this sleeping room was divided into three rooms, one of which was a bathroom.) A two story frame element was added at the northwest corner of the addition and the center section of the front porch was enclosed at the second story, these additions being possible storage or bath elements.

During World War I, the two oldest Bull sons, A. C. (Alfred Castleman) and Richard, left home to join the armed forces. A. C. had completed his degree at Texas A&M College in 1916, and Richard left the college after two years of study to join the army. While both sons were away, their father was suddenly stricken with influenza on October 6, 1918, and died immediately. A newspaper article about his passing describes the incident:

R. P. Bull, an old and respected citizen of Austin, died suddenly at his home, 308 East Seventh Street, at 7:15 o'clock Friday evening. He returned to his home about 6 p.m. apparently in his usual good health expressing no feelings of approaching illness to anyone and when at 7 o'clock the evening meal was announced he went to the table and was in the midst of the meal when at 7:15 he became faint and began to gasp for breath with a suddenness characteristic of heart failure. Members of the family rushed to Mr. Bull's assistance and the family physician immediately summoned, but the sufferer passed away before the physician arrived.

Thirteen days later, his son Richard died at home following an attack of Spanish influenza and pneumonia. He had returned from army radio school in Virginia the week before to visit his family and was already sick at the time of his arrival.

The family continued to live in the house at 308 E. 7th Street. The city directory for 1920 lists five occupants: R. M. Castleman, who was approaching the age of 84, Margaret Castleman Bull, recently widowed, and her three remaining children: A. C., listed as a farmer, Margaret A., listed as a student at the University of Texas and Howard, the youngest child.

On May 7, 1920, Major R. M. Castleman died and the house passed to Margaret Castleman Bull, his only surviving child. Mrs. Bull and her children continued to live at the house, even as the children became adults. In 1922, A. C. Bull became a partner in the general insurance firm of Bull & Deviney. He married Edna Hazlewood in 1924 and moved out of the family home. He later worked as a bank executive and was the chairman of the board of the American National Bank. Howard Bull was a student at the University of Texas in 1922, but continued to live at the house, even after he married. He joined his brother in the insurance business in 1932. Young Margaret joined her mother in charity activities and church work. Mrs. Bull was the president of the Senior Helping Hand for many years and Margaret was the president of the Junior Helping Hand; both were involved with the Children's Home run by the organization.

MARGARET BULL MOORE

Mrs. Bull died on June 27, 1934, and the home eventually passed to her daughter Margaret. Within a few years of her mother's death, Margaret married Herschel T. Moore, a man about three years older than she. Moore was a deputy collector with the Internal Revenue Service, living in a rooming house in downtown Austin in 1935. How the two met is uncertain, but it may have had something to do with the rooming house. It was the same location Margaret's cousin had lived in while attending classes at the University of Texas 12 years earlier.

The Moores left Austin after their marriage, and the only occupants of the house at 308 E. 7th were Howard Bull and his wife. However, Herschel Moore died in late 1940 and Margaret Moore and her son, Herschel, Jr., returned to Austin soon after. The city directory for 1942 lists Margaret Moore as the homeowner and Herschel Moore, Jr. as a resident of 308 E. 7th. Howard Bull and his wife moved to a home on Preston Avenue.

By the time Mrs. Moore returned to the house, the transformation from nineteenth century residential district to modern day commercial area had begun. Several houses across the alley were converted to apartments, and a large house on the block was removed. Although the entire neighborhood was changing, St. David's Episcopal Church was a direct force of change on this block. The church had acquired the house between it and Mrs. Moore's house and replaced it with a Sunday school building, which appears on the 1935 Sanborn map of the block.

The church needed more space and expansion room and began to inquire about the availability of adjacent property in 1946. The rector, Rev. Sumners, approached Mrs. Moore about the possibility of selling the house to the church. She replied that she could not sell at that time. She noted:

I am sure it would be wise, from a business standpoint, to sell my home and get further out into the residential district, but my heart tells me that I could never be really happy any where else except in this old house that holds so many happy associations and memories and which has sheltered four generations of our family.

Rev. Sumners then approached the owner of the property at 307 E. 8th Street, who also would not sell. By 1954, the church succeeded in acquiring the property at 305 E. 8th Street and converted the house to educational and nursery use.

By the early 1960's, the question of a plan for the future of St. David's was again under consideration. The church had identified new classroom and fellowship space and an enlarged sanctuary as critical issues for their future. They began to work with Brooks & Barr Architects to develop a master plan for future use and development of the church. The church needed more land and tried to acquire the northwest corner of the block, two cleared residential lots in use as surface parking. They were unable to persuade the owner to sell on terms they could agree to and were running out of options.

Almost in desperation, they approached Mrs. Moore and her brothers in April 1963 about the house at 308 E. 7th. A. C. and Howard Bull both favored the proposal, out of concern for their sister's future and safety in the changing neighborhood. Mrs. Moore, however, still did not want to sell the house. Apparently, her brothers counseled her and she decided to sell the next month. They quickly completed the negotiations, although Mrs. Moore would not budge from her original asking price of $150,000 for her three lots and house. The Vestry considered the cost and found it fair, since they had been prepared to pay $125,000 for the two lots of the parking area they had set out to buy. Mrs. Moore moved out in September 1963, and the house that was home to four generations of the Castleman/Bull/Moore family passed to its new owner.

ST. DAVID'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH

When St. David's bought the house, the added land and building relieved critical crowding for both the immediate and the long term. The land, located east of the church, allowed the building committee to complete a master plan and construction work for a substantial addition to the east of the sanctuary. The new parish building, Sumners Hall, remains in use today. Later, the Edens Center was constructed on land that was originally part of Lots 5 and 6 of Block 86, owned by R. M. Castleman a hundred years earlier.

The house itself was put to use immediately. It was renovated in the first phase of the 1960's era expansion, and used as transitional space for offices displaced by the construction work. In preparation for this, the basement level was remodeled by the addition of a concrete floor and new ceiling. A three level addition was made at the northwest corner of the house to provide restrooms at each level. New kitchen equipment was installed for use by the church school. The house was named Fontaine House in 1965 at the suggestion of Rev. Sumners, who felt it would be a fitting tribute to the founding Rector Edward Fontaine.

By 1966, the construction of the new parish hall was complete and Fontaine House was used as church school and youth group space on Sundays. There was a desire to put the house to use during the week and when the possibility of a federally funded daycare facility in the house was proposed in 1968, the Vestry approved. The entire basement level was used by the daycare, as well as a classroom on the first floor of the parish hall. The yard on the east side of Fontaine House was fenced for use as an outdoor play area. Minor improvements were made in the house for the new tenant, including installation of additional kitchen equipment, space heaters, new stair carpet and window repairs.

The following year, Caritas approached St. David's about space for their organization. Caritas was founded six years earlier. They would soon have to vacate their space on Brazos Street. The Vestry approved the use of the first floor of Fontaine House by Caritas, which allowed for the church to use the rooms on Sunday for classes. Air conditioning was installed in the house, both for Caritas and for the church school. In 1971, Caritas converted a second floor storage room into a small dental examining room as part of a dental referral service they operated in the house.

In later years, the daycare center moved out of the building, Caritas took over their space in the basement. Caritas still occupies the basement and first floors of Fontaine House. St. David's church offices are on the second floor. The southeast corner room on the second floor is used by a youth group as a classroom.

LANDMARK STATUS OF FONTAINE HOUSE

The Fontaine House is not a designated historic structure at either the city, state or national level. The St. David's sanctuary building was designated and zoned as a historic building by the City of Austin in 1976, but the designation applies only to the sanctuary and Lots 1 and 2 of the block. A church became a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark in 1966, but the designation applies to the sanctuary building only. The church was entered in the National Register of Historic Places in 1978. Although the extent is somewhat vague, Fontaine House is mentioned in only one sentence of the nomination text and the designation seems to apply only to the sanctuary building itself.

The house is listed in historic building inventories and research files maintained by the Austin History Center of the Austin Public Library and by the Austin Heritage Foundation of the Heritage Society of Austin. These entities have no regulatory authority over the use and disposition of the structures they have catalogued. They exist primarily as resources and repositories of information about the cultural and built heritage of the city.

As an artifact, the house is remarkably intact, having been protected and preserved by the four generations of the original builder's family who continuously occupied the house for almost one hundred years. The historic porch, interior doors, windows, millwork, trim and fireplaces are, for the most part, intact. When the church acquired the house, they were able to use the building almost as it was, without major modification of the interior or the principal facades. The most extreme changes, which were the parish hall and youth building additions constructed next to the house, occurred at the back of the building. The changes made to the interior of the building are largely reversible. Floor coverings and dropped ceilings can be easily removed to reveal the historic elements below or above. New partition walls are not of permanent construction and can be easily removed to reveal the historic spaces.

In evaluating the significance of historic properties for eligibility for landmark designation, a range of criteria are considered. Properties nominated to the National Register are evaluated for significance at a national, state or local level in terms of one or more of four criteria.

Eligible properties:

- are associated with historical events.
- are associated with the lives of significant people in our past.
- embody the distinctive characteristics of a type, period or method of construction, or represent the work of a master.
- have or may be likely to yield archaeological information important in prehistory and/or history.

In order to be designated to the Register, properties must also be at least 50 years old and must have maintained their historical integrity in terms of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling and association.

Properties considered for Landmark designation by the City of Austin are evaluated using similar criteria, as well as a few points that allow a broader interpretation. Included are consideration of:

- character, interest or value as part of the development, heritage or cultural characteristics of the city, state or country.
- embodiment of elements of architectural design, detail, materials or craftsmanship which represent a significant architectural innovation.
- relationship to other distinctive buildings, sites or areas which are eligible for preservation according to a plan based on architectural, historic or cultural motif.
- portrayal of the environment of a group of people in an area of history characterized by a distinctive architectural style.
- exemplification of the cultural, economic, social, ethnic or historical heritage of the city, state or country.
- a building that because of its location has become of value to a neighborhood, community, area or the city.
- value as an aspect of community sentiment or public pride.

In considering the significance of Fontaine House, several of the above criteria are applicable. The individuals and families who built and occupied the house were prominent citizens of the city, and their story is an interesting one. The house is an example of a popular style of residential architecture and represents a building type. The building as a surviving example of nineteenth century, residential downtown Austin is also of significance. On all of these bases the Fontaine House would be eligible for historic designation at the local, state and national levels.

A SURVEY FOR THE HISTORICAL LANDMARK INVENTORY
CITY OF AUSTIN, TEXAS

NAME OF SITE: St. David's Church
SITE ADDRESS: 300 East Seventh Street
ORIGINAL CITY DEED RECORDS: Book G, pp. 250-251

The first Episcopal Church in Austin was named "The Church of the Epiphany" at an organizational meeting held on January 18, 1851 at Swisher Inn, located at Pecan (Sixth Street) and Congress Avenue. The meeting was called by the Reverend Edward Fontaine, great grandson of Patrick Henry. Its members included prominent citizens of the town, among whom were a number of former officials of the Republic of Texas

Services for the new Church were held at first in the Senate Chamber of the Halls of Congress of the late Republic. Then, the Vestry rented a room for $100 a year on the second floor of a frame building standing on the northwest corner of Hickory Street (Eighth Street) and Congress Avenue. Mr. Fontaine's salary was $750 a year.

The Church of the Epiphany was admitted to the Diocese of Texas at Christ Church, Matagorda, during the proceedings of the Church Convention held there May 13-15, 1852.

The parishioners of the new Church were ambitious to have a permanent church building. In 1853 they hoped to achieve it. First, they selected some land high on a hill with a commanding view.

Site: In 1853 town lots number 1 and 2 in Block 86 at the corner of San Jacinto and Bois d' Arc (East Seventh Street) were bought from former Governor George J. Wood for $100. They measured 46 feet x 128 feet. Lot 3 on East Seventh Street was not purchased by the Vestry until July 19, 1963 from Mrs. Margaret Bull Moore.

The Church Building: The parishioners of the Church of the Epiphany were determined to build "a lasting Gothic structure of stone" on their land, and they laboriously raised $6,000. This whole sum was paid to a contractor in advance. Research has not revealed the Contractor's name for the "Minutes" of the early Church have never been located.

The cornerstone for the Church was laid with great ceremony on April 7, 1853. A local newspaper, The State Gazette, published a long account of the event attended by visiting clergy, civic and State leaders. A long, frustrating delay ensued before the structure was finally completed, for the contractor took his men away, probably to work for Abner Cook who was then in Austin constructing some Greek-Revival mansions.

The first services in the stone church: According to Mr. Fontaine, the first services in the new church were held on Sunday, October 8, 1854. It could not be consecrated then by Missionary Bishop George Washington Freeman because he had already made his annual spring visit in 1854.

Consecration Services: Consecration Services were held on Sunday, May 6, 1855 following several days of church celebrations.

The only surviving near photograph of Austin's first stone church was taken in 1865 by William Oliphant whose professional studio was located on the second floor of a wooden structure at the corner of Congress Avenue and Pecan (Sixth Street).

Construction and materials of craftsmanship and architectural style:

The little stone church measured 34 x 70 feet according to an article in The Daily State Journal. Spanish mission architecture influenced its construction for native limestone blocks smoothed by lime mortar were cemented together and then stuccoed. Restoration of a small section in the west wall some years ago uncovered rubble fillings in cracks before the stucco was applied. Five lancet windows pierced the east and west walls and small stone buttresses adorned rather than supported them. The west wall is intact except for two added feet at the top, but plain glass in all windows has been replaced by stained glass.

Amelia Barr, the early novelist and the Church's first organist, stated that the walls of the little church were painted pale pink which matched the spring blossoms on the surrounding chinaberry trees. Since the trees were cut down during the Civil War for firewood, they do not show in the Oliphant photograph. The church walls are still pale pink.

Tradition states that Mr. Fontaine designed the Church. His "Diary", now in the Mitchell Memorial Library at State College, Miss. is ornamented by skillful drawings and he had studied engineering. He may have been assisted by Robert Creuzbaur, a parishioner who served as a draftsman in the General Land Office.

Significant events and Persons

Within two years political events far away split the parish into two factions. The Northern sympathizers withdrew their membership and called the Reverend Charles Gillette to come to Austin and organize a parish. He came and the parish was named Christ Church on December 20, 1856. Its services were held in the County Courthouse on Sunday and its congregation grew because Mr. Gillette was an ardent missionary and an able, learned preacher. Mr. Fontaine, left in charge of poor Southerners, became discouraged because of church rivalry, debts, his wife death, and his loss of oratorical fire. In May 1859, he resigned and left Austin.

In order to survive, the two parishes united on July 19, 1859. At this important meeting the Church was renamed St. David's in order to honor the Right Reverend Alexander Gregg whose only parish in Cheraw, South Carolina was founded by Welsh settlers who revered their ancient Celtic saint.

Since Bishop Gregg was an ardent Southerner and the Rector a sturdy Northerner, the new parish during the Civil War was destined to be divided into two opposing groups again. When the War was over and Mr. Gillette went as a delegate to the General Convention of the Church held in Philadelphia October 4-24, 1865, he intended to relate how Bishop Gregg had pressured him to pray for Southern victories, but the Northern Bishops would not listen. Instead, they put their arms around the Southern Bishops and told them their names had been read out at all conventions as if they were only absent. Thus, the rift that developed in other denominations was avoided in the Protestant Episcopal Church.

While Mr. Gillett was away, services at St. David's were held by another Northerner who brought letters of recommendation. Even after Mr. Gillette's letter of resignation arrived, the Reverend Benjamin Rogers was kept for awhile on a trial basis. Since he was able to bring the two factions together, he accepted a call to be Rector on April 6, 1866, since no more dramatic divisions occurred.

Church Structure Changes Can Be Specified

1870 By this year the congregation exceeded the Church's seating capacity. An addition of 25 feet, constructed on the south, not only provided more pews but presented to Austin the imposing Gothic towers which the Church's founders had envisioned and which still stand. Austin's leading newspaper, The Daily State Journal, published a number of articles about the progress of the construction and also described the new imposing furnishings inside the Church when completed. It stated that the Rector, Mr. Rogers, not only designed the towers but all the new furnishings, among them the old Walnut pulpit (still in use) made "in the workshop of Joseph W. Hannig at the cost of $500." The sum to build it was donated by an officer of the Army of Occupation in 1869.

The construction of 1870 took some months and financing it was difficult. Finally, the Rector had to go north to borrow the sum of $1,500 from his sister. When completed, the inside of the Church was greatly changed for the sanctuary was moved to the south along with the Choir, which had its own small entrance on the southwest. The main entrance was on the north.

1885 After Mr. Rogers resigned on December 31, 1874, St. David's Vestry called the Reverend Thomas Booth Lee, a native of England and a graduate of Oxford University, whose long tenure brought to the Church its most influential period in the Capital City. By 1885 the Congregation once more exceeded the seating capacity of the Church not only because of his learned sermons but also because of its great choir. So, the Vestry engaged a local architect-parishioner, Mr. A.M.C. Nixon, to submit plans for enlarging the Church.

The plans demanded highly skilled workmen for the old roof was removed and all four walls of the Church raised two feet, then cemented and plastered. An imposing apsidal chancel and sanctuary were built on the north end behind three arches exactly like those built in 1870 at the south. The clergy secured a vesting room on the northeast of the sanctuary, and the choir could use the small northwest entrance.

The main entrance to the Church was moved back to the south where it originally was in 1854, but it now had great double doors and a number of stone steps to reach it. Inside, more pews were added, and all faced north. Even the roof was not neglected for a turrett with a gilded cross replaced the small 1854 metal cross which was remounted over the north end of the roof, where it still stands over the sanctuary. (One is tempted here to describe the interior with its Brussels carpeting, great glass chandeliers, and potted palms.)

The Texas Churchman, a Dioscesan publication, stated that the work was not completed until in April, 1885, and that the total cost amounted to $7,000. During construction and renovation, it stated that the 11 a.m. Sunday services were held at Millett Opera House. Dr. Richmond Kelley Smoot, Pastor of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and Reverend E. B. Wright of the First Presbyterian Church offered their churches for any Sunday afternoon or weekday services. The Texas Churchman stated that the first services held inside the enlarged church occurred on April 19, 1885, the second Sunday after Easter.

1887 By March 1887 the congregation at St. David's overflowed again into the aisles. The crisis came to a head when a new pipe organ, ordered from Pilcher Bors. of New Orleans, arrived and could not be fitted into the space reserved for it on the northeast. At a hurried meeting of the Vestry it was decided to pull down all of the east wall and extend the structure far enough to install the organ and then replace the wall and windows exactly as they were before. When completed, the space gained inside the church can be estimated by the row of inside columns erected to support the old roof line.

In late May The Texas Churchman stated: "The new organ is soon to be placed in position at St. David's, Austin. The work...interferred with the Lenten and Easter services which were held in the Opera House". Thus history repeated itself at St. David's.

In this latter part of the nineteenth century, the finest of the stained glass windows in the Church were given as memorials. Contrary to tradition or hearsay, only one was fabricated by the famous Tiffany Company of New York. It was given in 1910 and is called by the Church historian (who gave titles to all the windows) "The Angel of Death Window". A number of the windows were fabricated by the Charles F. Hogeman Company of New York. All are highly valued and insured. Several years ago a donor paid for protecting all the windows by installing plexiglass outside.

In the twentieth century, a few changes have taken place. In 1923 when the alley behind the Church was paved, a retaining wall was constructed on the northwest end of the Church on the advice of the Rector, the Reverend Lewis Carter Harrison. In 1914 the old 1885 turret and cross on the roof were replaced by the first electrified cross at the request of the Rector, the Reverend James Swayne Allen.

In 1965-1966, when the Reverend Charles Summers was Rector, a general restoration took place during which a small memorial chapel was constructed in the east section of the basement, and the old priests' sacristy was arranged for the use of the Altar Guild. A new priests' sacristy was constructed in the adjoining third floor of the new Parish House. At the front of the Church, the east and west entrances were harmonized by two matching doors. Wide stone steps were constructed outside of the east entrance to harmonize with those on the west. The huge double doors on the south, installed in 1885, were reconditioned. For the first time in its long history, the Church's appearance from the southeast almost equalled that from the west. In 1968 St. David's Church received an Historical Marker by grant of the State Historical Survey Committee.

In the 1969-1970 period three more stained glass memorial windows were installed, one above the outer door of the old northwest entrance, one in the baptistery which had been removed from the southeast corner to the northeast corner, and on in the Altar Guild sacristy. All three were fabricated by the Arco Company of San Antonio. The sacristy window, designed by Ruth Dunn, is the finest.

In spite of all changes through the years, the sturdy frontier aspect of St. David's Church has been miraculously preserved.

Present Owners: One cannot simply state that the present owners of St. David's property is the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Texas. The Church Council of the Diocese under Bishop F. Milton Richardson has jurisdiction over the property. Before any decision is made, the Bishop seeks the advice of the present Chancellor, Mr. Thomas D. McGowan whose legal approval is necessary, and he consults with the Chancellor on St. David's Vestry which usually initiates the change in the first place.

This survey has been made by Daisy Barrett Tanner, Church Historian.

SIGNIFICANT PERSONS ASSOCIATED WITH SITE: Frances Trask (name discrepancies; variations in different publications and sources: Frances Judith Trask, Frances L. Trask and Julia Trask) (1806-1892) came from Gloucester, Massachusetts to Texas in 1834. In 1834, she opened and ~~ARCHAEOLOGICAL VALUE:~~ operated a Girl's Boarding School at Cole's Settlement; reportedly courted by Sam Houston. No definite date on her arrival in Austin, but records reflect a "Miss Frances Trask" was teaching school here in 1846. In 1850 or 1851, she married William R. Thompson. ~~CHARACTER, INTEREST, VALUE AS PART OF THE DEVELOPMENT, HERITAGE OR CULTURAL CHARACTERISTICS OF AUSTIN, TRAVIS COUNTY OR THE UNITED STATES. (SIGNIFICANT ECONOMIC, SOCIAL, ETHNIC, HISTORICAL HERITAGE ASSOCIATIONS.)~~ and together they managed the Swisher Hotel until his death six months after they married. She continued to use her maiden name after her marriage, and some local sources of information fail to report her ever having been married. In 1854, she was teaching her school in the Capitol Building. Frances Trask was probably the first female school teacher in Austin, and possibly one of the first in Texas. Later owners of the house were many, among them Otto Schubert (1885-1901), who was owner and operator of the Gambrinus Saloon. O. J. Wagenfuehr, who was affiliated with Texas Bakery, owned the property at one time. Frances Trask purchased this house in 1855; it is not clear as to how long she retained ownership or when she sold the property and returned to Massachusetts. ★

★ "Frances Judith Somes (Trask) Thompson, daughter of Israel and Judith (Somes) Trask, was born in Gloucester, Massachusetts, on July 20, 1806. Educated in a seminary in New York in the 1820's, she moved, in the late 1820's to Dixboro, Michigan to live with the family of a cousin.....With that family she came to Matagorda, Texas, in the latter part of 1834. In December, 1834, or January, 1835, as advertised in the "Texas Republican", she opened a girls' boarding school at Cole's Settlement, later Independence.....In December, 1838, she was awarded a section of land in Robertson, Bell, and Milam counties in appreciation of her services as a pioneer teacher.....In 1841 Miss Trask was teaching at Austin. She then taught near Washington-on-the-Brazos, later returning to Austin. On February 25, 1851, she married William Thompson of Michigan; they operated the Swisher Hotel in Austin until her husband's death on September 1, 1851, when Mrs. Thompson resumed teaching, holding classes in the old Capitol building.....Frances Trask Thompson taught at Jasper in 1856 and in Karnes County in 1860. Late in 1860 she returned to Boston to live with her sisters.She died in Ashmont, Massachusetts on March 31, 1892." The Handbook of Texas History (Volume 2) Walter Prescott Webb, Editor-in-Chief.

"George Duncan Hancock, son of John Allen and Sarah (Ryan) Hancock, was born in Tennessee on April 11, 1809. ...reared in Alabama and came to Texas in 1835, serving in the Texas Army from March 15, to July 13, 1839. ...received 640 acres of land for his participation in the battle of San Jacinto, where he was one of five men who assisted Erastus (Deaf) Smith in destroying Vince's bridge.

"After his discharge from the army Hancock was engaged in locating and surveying lands and took part in several Indian and Mexican campaigns, including the expulsion of Adrian Woll, and the Somervell and Mier Expeditions. In 1843 in La Grange, Hancock was engaged in a mercantile business serving much of Central Texas. After moving to Austin in 1845, he represented Travis County in the House of Representatives of the Eleventh Legislature. He married Louisa Lewis, daughter of Ira Randolph Lewis, in 1855. Hancock was an ardent unionist during the Civil War. In 1873 he helped organize the Texas Veterans Association. He died in Austin on January 6, 1879, and was buried in Oakwood Cemetery."

"Between Pine and Pecan Streets, on the west side of the Avenue, Lot 4, Block 55, was a popular place because it was the pay office, the Treasury Department, which was at this location until 1853 when George Hancock bought the site from the State of Texas."

"The first store seems to have been started by Alexander Russell on that lot he bought at the first sale. (1839) Today this is the Scarbrough corner, where once again, a century and a score of years later, trees grow on the Avenue. Russell set up this stock in a two-story frame building there, with about 80 feet frontage on Pecan Street, at a place known as Russell's corner."

"Later this was sold to George Hancock and Morgan Hamilton, at whose general store dry goods were sold on one side and groceries and whiskey on the other until about the time of the Civil War."

"Activity returned to Austin. Log cabins were being converted into frame houses for permanent homes. A. J. Harrell, son of that first settler, Jacob Harrell, was county clerk in 1845, and in December Judge Thomas H. Duval arrived to practice law for ten years before becoming district judge. George Hancock also came to Austin that year, to remain until he died in 1879, and to become owner of that store at Congress and Pecan for a long time."

"On the northeast corner of the capitol grounds stood the new treasury building of white stone. The old treasury building on the wide side below Pecan and Congress became law offices. George Hancock, branching out, had bought this old building on Lot 4, Block 55, and was leasing out offices to such men as Attorney General Thomas J. Jennings, Ben Carter, A. J. Hamilton, W. S. Oldham, Thomas E. Sneed, and Alex W. Terrell."

"When South Carolina seceded in December, there was a hundred-gun salute to her at the capitol, and the citizens were selecting delegates to their secession convention. There were too many exciting issues in Travis County for the citizens to note the dramatic deeds in far away places like the pony express making its first trip west from St. Joseph, Missouri, to Sacramento, and the news about in the papers during the spring and summer of 1860. In Travis County sentiments were strong that summer, especially when George Hancock ran up the United States flag at his store at the present Scarbrough corner. After the Southerners paraded on December 19, the Union men gathered at Hancock's under the 90-foot flagpole and sang their songs. Hancock flew his flag until 1861, after Fort Sumter, when he took it down."

"In late July, 1865, troops came to Austin, and up again went the flagpole at Hancock's store corner. The military men stopped there and set up the stars and stripes. As of old, there were celebrating again and speeches by George W. Paschal and E. B. Turner. George Hancock, surprisingly, declined to speak when called upon. Was it because he felt badly as he looked across the street to the Dieterich corner and saw too many of his old friends--men who, too, had made Austin, standing there among the secessionists, silently watching the festivities at Hancock's corner?"

"The most momentous event of 1870 was that fall day when the old flagpole at Hancock's corner came down forever, to be replaced by a telegraph pole. The old flagpole had caused much contention since it was first put up by J. M. Blackwell, Frank Coupland, A. J. Hamilton, George Hancock, John Hancock, A. H. Longley, John T. McCrary, E. M. Pease, George W. Paschal, and E. B. Turner."

History of Travis County and Austin, 1839-1899

Thompson, Mrs. Frances Judith Somes (Trask) - "Frances Judith Somes (Trask) Thompson, daughter of Israel and Judith (Somes) Trask, was born in Gloucester, Massachusetts, on July 20, 1806. Educated in a seminary in New York in the 1820's, she moved, in the late 1820's, to Dixboro, Michigan, to live with the family of a cousin, John Dix. With that family she came to Matagorda, Texas, in the latter part of 1834. In December, 1834, or January, 1835, as advertised in the Texas Republican, she opened a girls' boarding school at Cole's Settlement, later Independence. In 1838 she was in Houston to secure the headright grant of her brother, Olwyn Trask, who was killed in a skirmish preceding the battle of San Jacinto. In December, 1838, she was awarded a section of land in Robertson, Bell, and Milam counties in appreciation of her services as a pioneer teacher. About 1839 she sold the school at Independence to Henry F. Gillette, who operated it as Independence Female Academy.

"In 1841, Miss Trask was teaching at Austin. She then taught at Rock Island near Washington-on-the-Brazos, later returning to Austin. On February 25, 1851, she married William Thompson of Michigan; they operated the Swisher Hotel in Austin until her husband's death on September 1, 1851, when Mrs. Thompson resumed teaching, holding classes in the old capitol building. In 1854 she was a member of the Daughters of Samaria.

"Frances Trask Thompson taught at Jasper in 1856 and in Karnes County in 1869. Late in 1860 she returned to Boston to live with her sisters. Upon their death, she moved to Ashmont, Massachusetts, to live with a nephew. She died in Ashmont on March 21, 1892."

"As action still was slow in starting, some settlers paid local teachers and provided a place for schools. Many simply sent their children back to home states; Lamar sent his daughter, Rebecca Ann, to Georgia in the early 1840's. A few boarding schools started, and Frances L. Trask, of Gloucester, Massachusetts, operated Texas' first such school in 1835, and came to Austin as an early Travis County teacher."

"Miss Frances Trask was teaching in Austin in 1846, and N. S. Rector opened his Colorado Female Academy."

"Frances Trask, who was teaching school in Austin in 1846, married William Thompson, the hotel keeper, in 1850. They managed the Swisher Hotel and when Thompson died, she started teaching school again."

"During the years of the fifties, up to the time of the Civil War, when most of the schools closed, there were many schools starting though some lasted only a short time:...Mrs. Frances Trask Thompson's School, which met in the Capitol building during 1854. She was now the widow of William R. Thompson, the hotel keeper, she had met and married while teaching school in early Austin."

von Koenneritz, S. J. - "certified public accountant; born New Orleans, La., September 16, 1862, son of Frank and Helena (Singreen) von Koenneritz. His father, born in Saxony, Germany, was educated for diplomatic service, spoke twelve languages, came to America in 1852. Subject of this ketch was educated in public and private schools in Texas. Married Laura Hayes Bowers, of Austin, Tex., Aug. 1896. One daughter, Helena B. (Chicago).

"Mr. von Koenneritz came to Texas with his parents in the fall of 1869, but returned to New Orleans when a young man and spent several years with the Illinois Central R. R. in that city. Returning to Texas he entered the employ of the State National Bank of Austin when it was a small institution and remained with this bank 36 years, during which he became an officer and director. While connected with this bank he studied law. He engaged in public accounting in leisure time for more than 10 years and qualified as a certified public accountant in 1916. He resigned from the State National Bank of Austin in 1918 and has since given his time to practice as a certified public accountant and income tax and estate tax consultant, with offices in Austin. He is also a director of the Austin Home Co., a holding corporation in Austin.

"In military affairs he was declared the best-drilled soldier in Central Texas as a young man and was awarded a gold medal offered by the commander of the Austin Greys of the early Texas Volunteer Guard. He was made captain and adjutant of his regiment and later appointed to the staff of the Texas National Guard.

Description

The Trask House at 105 Neches Street is a one-story vernacular dwelling now used for offices. With a center-passage plan and Greek Revival detailing, the house utilizes load-bearing masonry construction with ashlar-cut limestone. Exterior walls are stuccoed except for those on the front, where the stone finish is exposed. A side-gabled roof with wood shingles on the west slope and standing-seam metal on the east slope caps the structure. The house also has a basement which is seen rarely on local domestic structures.

The five-bay front, which faces west onto Neches Street, presents a symmetrical composition with a pedimented portico extending from the central bay. The door is protected by the portico and features sidelights and a tripartite transom. The door has two round-arched lights set within the door itself. The three-bay portico rests on a concrete porch floor, an obvious non-historic component. The classical proportions of the portico, with its cornice and squared Doric columns, is characteristic of Greek Revival architecture, a style that was popular in Texas during the middle of the 19th century. The windows are double hung with wood sashes and six-over-six lights, another feature that suggests a mid-19th century construction date. The window, as well as door, openings are capped by flat arches.

Side elevations present a saltbox-like configuration with the rear (east) slope of the gabled roof extending farther down than on the front. The south elevation has an exterior stone chimney that rises from the apex of the gabled roof. The windows there are identical to those on the front.

The rear elevation has similar windows and single door entrance that is centered on the wall.

A small gable-roofed outbuilding stands behind (to the east) of the structure and utilizes ashlar limestone construction with flat arched openings similar to the adjacent house. The outbuilding is a one-room structure with an exterior stone chimney on the east elevation. A single-door entrance pierces the south elevation.

Historic Background

Tract 25 is described as the center 6 feet of the west 60 feet of lot 1 and the north 58.7 feet of 1, as well as the north 58.7 feet of lot 2, Block 10, Original City of Austin. The parcel includes a one-story stone residence that is now used for office space. The structure was designated a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark in 1972 and was stated to be associated with Frances Trask, an early Austin educator.

Historical investigations confirm that the land was owned by Frances Trask for almost 20 years and she probably was responsible for the construction of the house. She acquired the property (then described as lots 1, 2, 3 and 5) in 1855 for $54.80 (Austin History Center vertical subject files). The low purchase price suggests that no improvements had been made to the property by that time.

Frances Trask was a prominent and colorful figure in early educational efforts in Texas. A native of Massachusetts, she came to Texas by way of New York and Michigan. In 1834 at the age of 18, she moved with the family of a cousin, John Dix, to Matagorda, Texas, but eventually relocated to Washington County where she established a school in Coles Settlement (now Independence). The school prospered and in about 1839 she sold it to Henry F. Gillette who operated it as the Independence Female Academy which later became Mary Hardin Baylor University.

Trask moved to Austin at an unknown date but by January 12, 1841 the Austin City Gazette noted a list of letters for her at the post office. Deed research indicated that she purchased a lot on Congress Avenue in 1849 for $100 and sold it ten years later for $1,600 (Travis County Deed Records D:79; O:251). On February 25, 1851 she married William R. Thompson, an old acquaintance from Michigan, but he died on September 1 later that year. Although known legally as Mrs. Frances Thompson, she reportedly was still called Miss Trask by local residents (Austin History Center vertical subject files).

She resumed her teaching career after her husband's death and conducted classes in the old Capitol Building. By 1856, according to the Handbook of Texas, she was teaching in Jasper, Texas; by 1860 she was living in Karnes County, Texas. Sometime in the 1860s, however, she reportedly moved back to Massachusetts, though she is said to have visited Texas in the 1870s (Austin History Center vertical subject files). Such a visit may have occurred in 1871 when she conveyed the power of attorney to James H. Raymond to act on her behalf in matters regarding her property, which included lots 1, 2, 3 and 5, Block 10, as well as other parcels.

In 1872 Raymond conveyed the lots in Block 10 to Isaac V. Jones for $500, a substantial increase from Trask's $50 purchase price. The city directory for 1872-73 noted Jones residing in the house which was shown on the 1873 bird's eye map of Austin. Subsequent directories listed Robert F. Campbell, a "capitalist" and a real estate agent, as the occupant. In 1885 Jones sold lots 1, 2 and 3 to Ottomar Schubert for $2,750 (Travis County Deed Records 63:525). In the deed Jones and his wife, Claudia, are listed as residents of Bell County and thus did not live in the house. Schubert, on the other hand, did live in the dwelling and remained there for the next 16 years. Schubert is best known as proprietor of the Gambrinus Saloon on Congress Avenue.

S. J. Koernitz acquired the house and accompanying property in 1901 but sold it one year later to Otto J. Wagenfuerhr for $1,750 (Travis County Deed Records 178:593; 183:85). Wagenfuerhr, who owned the Texas Bakery, lived in the house until 1911 when James Waterston Jr., a stone cutter, was listed in the city directory as the resident of 105 Neches Street. In 1912 Wagenfuehr divided the property, which, until that time, included all of lots 1, 2 and 3, and sold all of lot 1 and the west 41 feet 10 inches of lot 2 to Mrs. C. A. Cabaniss and her son, John, neither of whom lived in the house according to city directories. Instead, it was used for rental purposes. In 1926 Mrs. C. A. Cabaniss died and her undivided interest in the property was bequeathed to John Cabaniss. In 1929 he carved a parcel from the southwest corner of lot 1 and conveyed it to the Magnolia Petroleum Co., which subsequently erected a service station at the corner (see Tract 24). Cabaniss died in 1940 and his heirs sold the remaining portion of the property to Velma L. Boone (see Tract 23). Since then, it has been owned by Alex Joseph and Marshall Kuykendall, among others.

In 1971 attorneys Allen E. Smith and Irwin Salmanson acquired the house and subsequently rehabilitated it for use as their law office. The house, designated a Recorded Texas Historic Landmark in 1972 and honored with an Austin Heritage Society Award in 1973, is presently owned by Robert F. Davis.

Conclusions

The Trask House, as it is known locally, is an outstanding example of a mid-19th century center-passage dwelling with some Greek Revival detailing. The structure embodies many of the best elements of Austin's history and building traditions. The house and its associated outbuilding to the rear are representative of the type of vernacular structures that once prevailed in Austin but few of which survive today. Thus, it is a vital link to an important era in local history.

Land on which the house stands was owned by Frances Thompson (known by her maiden name "Miss Trask") who was an early educator in Austin and other parts of the state. No documentation has been uncovered that confirms that she built or even lived in the structure although more in-depth research may shed light on the matter. Nevertheless, the house and its associated outbuilding, which are now listed as a Registered Texas Historical Landmark, are considered to be eligible for listing in the National Register at least under Criterion C and possibly under Criterion A. In addition, the land on which the structure sits may merit formal designation as a State Archeological Landmark.

It is strongly recommended that the Trask House be preserved in situ and that a proper buffer be provided and maintained. The adaptive reuse of the structure as an office, interpretative center or creek-side entrance to the convention center should be exhaustively explored. Further, the utilization of the Trask House's style, period and materials as a motif and guide in the design of the convention center itself would help provide a proper context and would also help to assure that the new complex is rooted in Austin's building traditions.

Should it become necessary, the structure should be moved to a new site -- a procedure which often renders a structure ineligible for historical designation. The park location being considered by Convention Center planners is excellent because of its proximity to the original site. Moving this load-bearing masonry structure should be accomplished only with the latest "in toto" techniques under the supervision of experienced preservation professionals. The new site should be selected and prepared to closely simulate the house's original location.

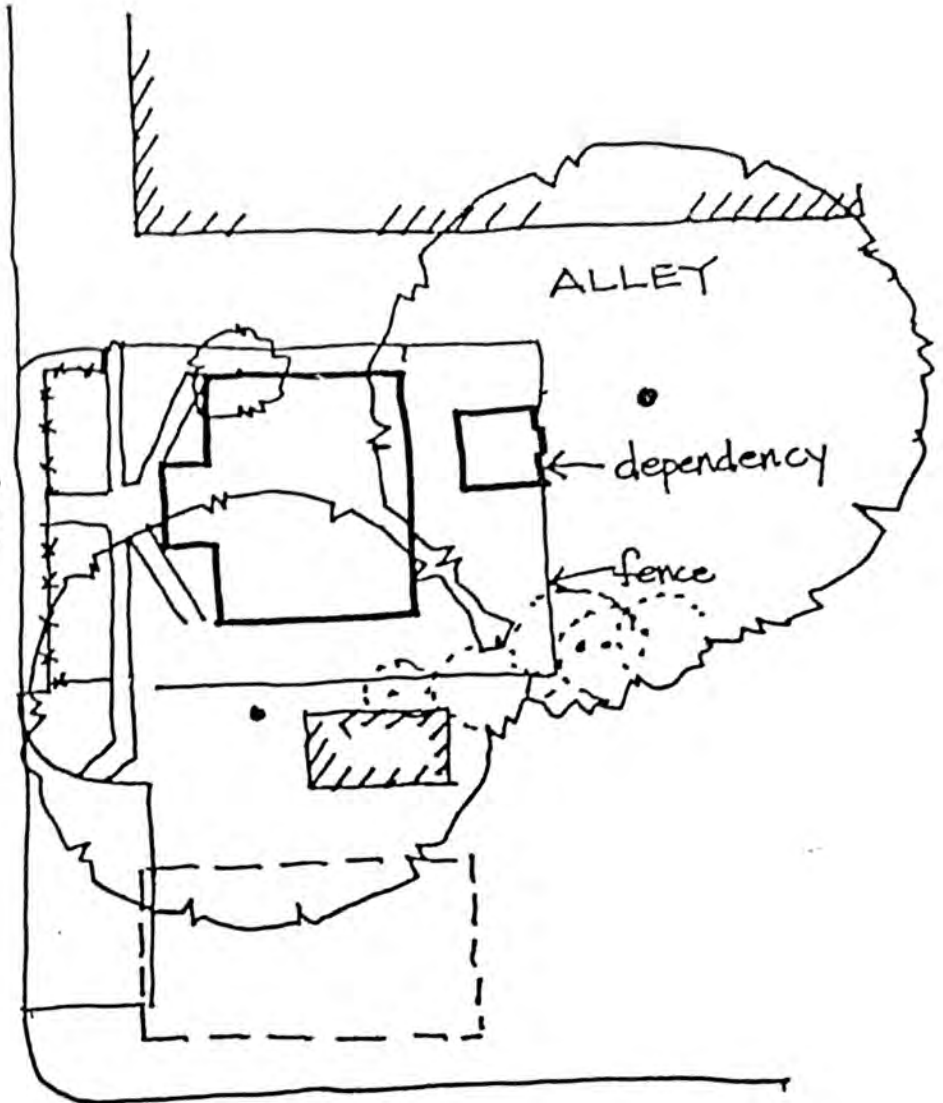

Archival photographic documentation and HABS measured drawings should be considered mandatory whether or not the structure is moved. (Note, HABS-like drawings were completed by University of Texas architecture students a few years ago. They are on file at the University of Texas Architectural Drawings Collection and could be used as the basis for more thorough investigations and documentation.)

In addition to the architectural studies recommended above, archeological investigations should be considered an integral part of the documentation of this structure. Such investigations will be necessary should the structure be moved.

HISTORIC ZONING CHANGE SUMMARY SHEET

CASE: C14H-74-026 DATE: 10/19/89

STRUCTURE: Trask House

ADDRESS: 105 Neches Street

OWNER(S): Robert F. Davis

ADDRESS: P. O. Box 5906 (63)

NEIGHBORHOOD ORGANIZATION: Old Pecan Street Assn., 412 East 6th (01)
Downtown Austin Partners, 600 Congress, Suite 1746 (01)
Sector 1, 1712 San Gabriel (01)

CHANGE REQUESTED: FROM: CBD-H, Central Business District-Historic
TO: CBD, Central Business District

PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT: To grant CBD, Central Business District, as space requirements for convention center cannot accommodate or incorporate the structure.

LANDMARK COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION: To grant CBD, Central Business District. (6-4)
(Relocate structure to lot at southeast corner East 3rd and Red River Streets; restore and utilize structure in Phase 1 of convention center construction.)

PLANNING COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION: No recommendation; lack of quorum vote. (Motion to adopt staff recommendation and HLC recommendation failed on a vote of 3-4.)

COMMENTS: Trask House would be better served at East 3rd and Red River Street as its appearance and economic viability would not be compromised and overwhelmed by the scale and massing of the convention facility.
