Additional Backup Information:

This commission is part of Phase III of the City’s AIPP initiative, implemented in collaboration with the AEDP at the Austin-Bergstrom International Airport (AUS). Developed in partnership by the Office of Arts, Culture, Music, and Entertainment and the Department of Aviation, the phased AIPP plan was approved by the Arts Commission in August 2024.

Phase III prioritized artists local to Austin and Central Texas, building on Phase II which prioritized the inclusion of Texas-based artists, and on the nationally focused Phase I. All thirteen commissions awarded in this phase were granted to Austin area artists, including this project. Phase III continues the City's focus on elevating local voices while delivering innovative, meaningful public art experiences in civic infrastructure.

About the Artist

Shannon “Shan” Fannin is an Austin-based vehicle artist known for her large-scale acrylic paintings that blend hyper-realism with a touch of abstract expression. Inspired by the reflective surfaces and sculptural forms of vehicles, she connects their curves and details to the human form, a link rooted in her love of figurative drawing. Her award-winning work captures not just the beauty of cars, motorcycles, and airplanes, but the personal stories they represent. Demonstrating a mastery of technique and skill, Shannon is an ideal artist to activate a Restroom Entry with work that represents specific motifs within Austin as a changing city.

Project Context Within the AUS AIPP Plan

This project is one of thirteen Phase III commissions within the AUS AIPP program. While Phase I focused on national artists, and Phase II emphasized Texas-based artists (particularly those living and working in Austin), Phase III was reserved exclusively for Austin-based creatives.

This phased model:

- Ensures a balance of excellence and equity;
- Prioritizes meaningful engagement with local artists; and
- Aligns with the AEDP infrastructure timeline.
