Additional Backup Information:

Austin Parks and Recreation's (APR) Concession Policy defines a legacy concession as a concession currently operating in a City park pursuant to a concession agreement with APR that has been continuously owned and operated in the same park location by the same person or a family member for at least 20 years; has operated under the same or a similar name for the entirety of its existence; contributes to the City's history and culture, as determined by the APR Director in their sole discretion; and has maintained the physical features of the concession in good condition.

Zilker Park Boat Rentals (ZPBR), located along Barton Creek just downstream from the Barton Springs Swimming Pool in Zilker Park, has served the Austin community since 1969. Originally established as a canoe rental service, the concession has expanded to include kayaks and stand-up paddle boards, supporting outdoor recreation and tourism in one of the City's most iconic parks. The business has remained under continuous family ownership and was the first boating concession to operate on Lady Bird Lake.

On February 28, 2006, the City entered into a revenue concession agreement with ZPBR. The initial term expired on March 1, 2011, and included two optional five-year extensions. Since then, the City has approved four additional extensions beyond the original agreement term, with the current extension set to expire on February 28, 2026.

The Director of APR has determined that ZPBR meets all the criteria established in the Concession Policy for a legacy concession, and approval of the negotiation and execution of a legacy concession contract with ZPBR aligns with the Concession Policy's goals and objectives.
